Dear Editor:

The Consumer Protection Agency Act is the most important piece of Consumer Legislation being considered by Congress this year. It has a good chance of passing, but the word from capitol hill is that mail on the CPA issue is running 100 to 1 against the bill. For the fifth year, many business groups have called on their members and employees to urge their senators to oppose the CPA.

Realizing that an agency that would not have power to regulate, but would represent the consumers' interest in the courts and before regulatory agencies at the Federal level, is not inconsistent with the interest of business, a few business groups support establishing a CPA. In addition, CPA is supported by an active coalition of over 80 consumer groups, including the Virginia Citizens Consumer Council.

A filibuster is expected in June when the CPA Bill goes to the Senate floor. Sixty-seven votes (or 2/3) are necessary to cut off debate and allow the senate to vote on the matter. This vote will be close at best. The CPA was killed in the last session by filibuster.

It is crucial that senators Harry F. Byrd, Jr., and William L. Scott (US Senate, Washington DC 20510) hear from their constituents in support of the CPA. Now is the time for consumers to contact their senators urging them to vote for a strong CPA -one with an independent administrator, its own lawyers, sufficient power to get necessary information to prepare cases and testimony, and authority to intervene in a wide range of agency proceedings and activities. Senators Byrd and Scott should be urged to support a strong CPA, to oppose all weakening amendments, and to vote for cloture should a filibuster occur.

these men chose to run for re-election.

Mr. Holland, a member of the council for 16 years, served as Chairman of the Finance Committee. Mr. Webb, a member of the council for 8 years, served as Chairman of the Fire Committee. Their term of office expires July 1, 1974.

Two new members elected to serve on the Town Council, Marvin J. House, Jr. and Ronald Spiggle, will begin their term of office effective July 1, 1974 and will attend their first official meeting on July 15th.

In other business, a motion was made and passed to post signs "Slow - Children At Play" on Lee-Grant Street from Liberty Baptist Church to Ben Marshall residence.

Progress is being made at the intersection of Church Street and Lee-Grant to improve safety conditions at this intersection.

Bill Slagle, Town Manager, reported to Council that during the past month Appomattox County issued the following permits through the Office of Building and Housing: permits for new structure, 21; permits for alterations and additions, 2; permits for other than those above 21; and number of contractors who registered were 2.

Four of these permits were issued in the Town of Appomattox: Thelma Martin, 100 amp service; Bennett Matthews, 2 new houses; and John McLean, remodel.

Slagle also reported that the 900 foot 6 inch waterline along Lee-Grant Avenue has been completed.

Increases In 1974 Crop Wheat Loan Rates

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently announced increases in 1974-crop wheat county loan rates by major wheat producing areas.

The 1974 national average loan rate of $1.37 per bushel, announced Aug. 16, 1973, is 12 cents above the 1973 national average loan rate of $1.25 per bushel.

An increase in the loan rate will be effective in every county. It will, however, vary by production area to reflect differences in export demand and transportation costs. As in the past, protein premiums will be added to the loan rates. For example, No. 1 Hard Red Spring wheat in North Dakota with 14.5 percent protein would add 9 cents to the basic loan rate.

County loan rates in the Upper Plains states, representing the Hard Red Spring wheat producing area, will generally average 8 to 9 cents above those in effect for 1973. In the Middle and Southern Plains area, representing Hard Red Winter wheat producing areas, county loan rates will generally average 9 to 10 cents above 1973. For the most part, the Southern Plains area has maintained a strong price structure relative to the Northern Plains since it is the principal supply area for the heavy increases in wheat exports throught the Gulf ports.

Increased transportation costs have had a relatively minor effect in the Soft Red wheat area of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and have been more than off-set by strong demand for this class of wheat. Hence, county loan rates in this area will generally average 16 to 17 cents above 1973. Similarly, the county loan rates in the Pacific Northwest, representing the White wheat producing area and tributary areas of Hard Red Winter and Spring wheats, will be 12 to 17 cents above 1973.

Copies of county rates are being sent to state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices. Copies also are available in the ASCS Grain Division, Room 5741-S U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250.

12 Young Virginians Tour Washington

The Pastor Speaks

Ingratitude is one of the great sins of our time. We can commit it without thinking. So many people go through life without showing appreciation.

Every day we should take a few minutes to reflect on the contributions others have made to our welfare. We should ponder the help given to us by others.

This should challenge us to go out of our way to be kind to those we meet. We should learn the art of saying, "thank you". Just two simple words yet they mean so much.

Some one has pointed out that in our home, we should always act as if we had had company present. What a difference this would make.

Learn to be appreciative of all that is done for you and life will have more charm. Ingraditude make us move through life in shadows.

The Sunday School Lesson

HERBERT C. BRADSHAW
P. O. BOX 1833
DURHAM, N. C., 27702
Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, June 23, 1974.
Topic: The Christian's Hope and the Daily Task.
Scripture: 2 Thessalonians.
Do not be weary in well-doing. 2 Thessalonians 3:13.

A bright and witty young Japanese man who was a guide to tourist groups visiting the ancient Japanese City, Kyoto, used to attract the attention of his audience, as he prepared them for their visit to Buddish temples and Shinto shrines, by saying that 73 per cent of the Japanese people are Shintoists and 72 per cent Buddhists. He explained his seemingly contradictory mathematics by saying that many Japanese subscribe to both religions, that Shinto is a religion of the practical, the here and now, while Buddhism is a religion of the hereafter.

Christianity is a religion concerned with both the here and now and the hereafter. Sometimes one is stressed at the expense of the other, and some Christians ignore the one as they emphasize the other. Paul, in his Second Letter to the Thessalonians, the basis for this week's International Sunday School lesson, struck a fine balance between the two, a balance well expressed in the lesson topic, "The Christian's Hope and the Daily Task."

The Christian lives in the convinced hope of eternal life for himself and of the return of Jesus Christ in the triumph of God over the forces of sin and evil. Such a hope promises life without end for the believer, in a spiritual body in everlasting fellowship and association with God. Such a hope also promises a new earth in which God will reign supreme, His righteous will uncontested, for He will have conquered the enemy which has so long opposed Him and sought to frustate His will for mankind and the world.

The early Thessalonian Christians were very much concerned with these matters, for Paul had told them about these hopes for the future. During his short stay in Thessalonica, the apostle had not been able to develop these themes fully, and after he had left the city questions arose in the church there. He had learned about the questions, and he answered them in two letters which he wrote from Corinth. In both letters Paul discusses eternal life for the believer and the return of the Lord Jesus Christ.

At the time he wrote the letters, Paul held the view, also widely held among early Christians, that Christ's return was imminent. The expectation of an early end of the age in which they were living, with the transition for the individual into eternal life, led some to so concentrate on this pleasant expectation that they withdrew from their present life with its work and obligations.

Paul made clear that the Christian's great hopes of eternal life and of God's triumph in the world, even if they are realized in the immediate future, do not justify abandoning present-day work and responsibility. The believer is to keep at his work, to earn his living, regardless of the imminence of the end of the age.

In insisting that the believer work and earn his living, Paul was being consistent with the nature of man as God created him. God so made man's personality that he must be busy if he is not to become easy prey to evil. "An idle mind is the devil's workshop," runs the adage, and experience and observation confirm its truth. Even when man was in the paradise of Eden, he was not to be idle, for he was charge with responsibility for tending and cultivating this garden.

Paul's exhortation to the Thessalonian Christians, "to do their work in quietness and to earn their own living," is good psychological advice today. Also good advice is his injunction to "not be weary in well-doing." This advice is two-pronged: it enjoins the believer to do his daily work well, even as it counsels him to seen and to find good work, that is, work which will benefit humanity, to do.

It is highly important for the Christian to realize his obligation to work and to his work. The medieval monks had a phrase, "To work is to pray." One honors his God by doing quality work, even as he serves his fellow man. There is spiritual therapy in work, for work helps to keep a person well-adjusted and in good spirit.
